IN COLLABORATION WITH

AN INITIATIVE OF

Late Fumiaki Takano, a renowned Japanese landscape architect often regarded as the 'Father of Landscape Architecture' in Japan, left an indelible mark on the field.

In 1975, he founded Takano Landscape Planning Co., Ltd., and his visionary designs seamlessly integrated nature and ecology. Some of his notable works, such as the Tokachi Millennium Forest, Shah Alam Lake & Park, and Forest of Natyu, stand as testaments to his legacy. Beyond his projects, Takano's leadership extended to the global landscape architecture community as he served as the president of IFLA Asia-Pacific Region from 2018 to 2020, championing the education and exchange of young landscape architects in the region.

Join us on this journey to revisit Takano's Landscape Masterpiece and explore Hokkaido through the lens of his visionary legacy.
